The UN has designated two themes for 2019: the International Year of Indigenous Languages and the International Year of the Periodic Table of Chemical Elements.

2019: International Year of the Periodic Table of Chemical Elements

2019 marks the 150th anniversary of one of the most significant achievements in science: the discovery of the periodic table of chemical elements. Curtin researchers from The Institute for Geoscience Research (TiGeR) are using chemistry to inform future missions to Mars. By measuring the spectral features of minerals found in Martian meteorites – such as pyroxene, a mineral composed of magnesium, iron, silicon and oxygen – they can better determine the surface geology and geological processes of Mars, and whether life could exist there.

The UN has designated two themes for 2019: the International Year of Indigenous Languages and the International Year of the Periodic Table of Chemical Elements.

2019: International Year of Indigenous Languages

Many languages around the world are disappearing at an alarming rate. The Year of Indigenous Languages raises awareness about the importance of languages, not only to the people who speak them, but for the promotion of diversity and understanding. The Wirloomin Noongar Language and Stories Project is a Curtin collaborative project that consolidates Noongar cultural heritage and promotes healing through the collation of stories and songs, and shares this cultural knowledge with the community. wirloomin.com.au

Noongar Language and Culture is an online Curtin course offered via edX that enables you to learn about the Noongar people of Western Australia, their culture and language. curtin.edu/noongar-language-culture
